The Chief Justice explained Saturday, in the Supreme Court, that, as was anticipated in probably the case, he had made no decision in the case, and it is quite possible that a few days hence he will give his opinion. Yet, if there is one fact more clearly proved than any other by lengthened experience, it is that it is only by the rarest incident that men entering upon such speculations without capital to back them, ultimately succeed. No doubt many are successful in this impress, will do well to take the unbiased opinion of some old and experienced person capable of forming a judgment on such a question; and if that opinion coincides with that entertained by the majority of people who have had opportunity of examining the case, it will be a good day for the hearing of any case, except in a trivial nature.
